COMMENT OF
THE DAY

Govt. Replies

It can be acknowledged, without quibbling, that Government made effective replies to the several and varied points raised by the Unofficials in the Budget debate. Some of the queries presented the official spokesmen with opportunities for an emphatic restatement of policies and this in itself added value to the whole debate. The Financial Secretary stoutly defended the existing system of estimating. The difference between the methods of budgeting and presenting accounts by Government and commercial businesses has, of course, long been appreciated. But that does not mean Government cannot apply advantageous modifications to the official system. This was tacitly acknowledged by the Financial Secretary, and Mr J. H. Collar, who advanced the suggestion that we should, even if only unofficially, endeavour to prepare more comprehensive estimates of recurrent expenditure, can derive a measure of satisfaction from the promise that an attempt will be made in the course of the year to "carry out the statistical exercise suggested." If the result does little more than add to general enlightenment, it will have achieved something.

Mr Selwyn Lloyd To Meet Egypt's Foreign Minister

London, Mar. 27.

The Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr Selwyn Lloyd, will visit Cairo on Saturday to clear up differences over the Sudan with Egypt's Foreign Minister, Mohammed Fawzi.

Premier Mohammed Naguib is expected to join the talks with the British Minister who has been discussing the Sudanese problem with the local authorities in Khartoum since the last weekend.

The announcement of the Egypt visit coincided with reports that members of Egypt's Junta Cabinet had held emergency meetings on the deteriorating Sudan situation.

The forthcoming talks are expected also to extend to the deadlocked question of the Suez Canal Zone on which Britain continues steadfastly to oppose Egypt's demands for unconditional evacuation.

Britain maintains that the Sudan Government is completely impartial on the issue of the Anglo-Egyptian dispute over the future of the territory.

Mr Lloyd has reported to London that his on-the-spot discussions with officials and members of Sudan political parties have convinced him of this impartiality.

Officials denied flatly suggestions in Cairo Press today of an expert to be appointed as permanent head of the Traffic Department was not wholly convincing. It appeared to miss the point that a specialist equipped not only with theoretical and practical knowledge of traffic problems, but endowed with ingenuity and initiative, could probably make more effective contributions towards solving our traffic conundrums through lengthy tenure of office than a system of chopping and changing, employed mainly apparently to make use of a "reservoir of knowledge." It is the enterprising man, capable of thinking out new ideas and expedients, who is best fitted for the work, and the longer his talents can be employed for this purpose the more beneficial they become. And full use could still be made of the valuable "reservoir" of police officers possessing practical knowledge of traffic problems.

NO PROGRESS

Differences over the Sudan appeared, meanwhile, to reduce even further prospects for an early solution of the dispute over the future of the strategically-vital Suez Canal Zone. Since the rejection last week by Egypt of American participation in the talks no progress has been made towards a solution or even a start of negotiations. The British Government is at a loss so far for an alternative and has failed to date to agree on a new course of diplomatic approach to General Naguib, according to official sources.

Mr Lloyd is not expected to put any detailed cut and dried proposals before Fawzi when they meet two days from now. But he will probably seek to establish whether Naguib might modify his uncompromising formula of unconditional evacuation to pave the way for full-dress talks on a speedy settlement.

Some observers here hope that Naguib, while keeping up his vigorous campaign for unconditional evacuation, may nevertheless see a way to link it in some manner with overall defense measures for the Middle East which Britain and the United States consider as essential to prevent a defence vacuum in the region.

It was originally hoped that negotiations would be under way this week but in view of Egypt's recent rejection of the Anglo-American approach instructions to Ambassador Sir Ralph Stevenson have proved outdated.

There is a good deal of speculation in diplomatic quarters about the next move and Government experts are wracking their heads for a face-saving formula which would enable the talks at least to get started.

NAGUIB'S DEMAND

Calgary, Mar. 28.

General Mohammed Naguib, the Egyptian Prime Minister, who returned here last night from his 2,500-mile tour of Upper Egypt, will today demand of the British Minister of State, Mr Selwyn Lloyd, unconditional evacuation of British troops from Egypt, it was stated here.

General Naguib saw the United Ambassador, Mr Jefferson Caffery, tonight soon after his return from the week-long tour during which he constantly stressed the revolutionary movement's pledge to secure the evacuation of British forces.

Thousands turned out to welcome General Naguib on his return from a trip during which he stressed the unconditional evacuation theme in 25 major speeches.

Mr Lloyd will be passing through Cairo on his way home from the Sudan, where he has been trying to smooth out Anglo-Egyptian differences over the implementation of the agreement promising the Sudan self-government. —Reuter.

GERM WARFARE ALLEGATIONS

Pointed Challenge Made
To Russia

United Nations, Mar. 27.

Mr Ernest Gross, United States delegate to the United Nations, today accused the Soviet Union of originating the "false and malicious campaign" of germ warfare by United States forces in the Far East.

He said the charges were designed to spread hatred, division and suspicion in the minds of men and to increase tension in the world.

"If this indeed is the considered purpose of the new Soviet leadership, how are we to appraise their professions of peace?"

The United States also challenged the Communists to permit all American soldiers, whose alleged confessions have been used to back up germ warfare charges, to be brought to a neutral area to be questioned by an impartial United Nations Commission.

This challenge was made in the General Assembly's Political Committee at the opening of debate on a United States request for an immediate investigation of Communist charges that United Nations forces in the Far East have used bacteriological weapons.

Mr Gross said American prisoners who were alleged to have admitted the use of bacteriological warfare should be given a "fair chance to tell the truth" to impartial investigators.

"I ask that they be brought to an area in some country which is neither a participant in the United Nations Command in Korea nor whose government has supported or approved the action against the aggressors in Korea," he said.

"It is for the Soviet delegate to accept this offer, in the name of the Chinese people. We await his reply," Mr Gross said.

PROPOSAL DEFEATED

Earlier the Political Committee rejected by 40 votes to 15 with five abstentions a Soviet proposal that Chinese Communists and North Koreans should be invited to join the debate on germ warfare charges.

Just before Mr Gross spoke, Mr Valerian Zorin, the Soviet delegate declared that by this action, the Committee had "closed the door to an impartial investigation. The Soviet group of five voted in favour of inviting the Chinese and North Koreans—and were joined by Argentina, Indonesia, India, Burma and other members of the Asian-African group.

Mr Gross declared that the recent confessions of two American military officers were alleged to have identified a certain directive from the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff which was supposed to have instituted a plan for bacteriological warfare in Korea. They had allegedly identified certain military personnel who participated in meetings for carrying this plan into operation.

"There was no such directive and there were no such meetings," Reuter.

The American delegate said the so-called investigations by the Communists had been made by "naïfif soldiers of the party." The so-called confessions from prisoners had been induced by familiar Communist methods.

He said that the proposed Commission would be required to report back to the General Assembly in time for the next session beginning in September.

Frankfurt, Mar. 27.

Mr Warren Austin, 77, former United States Senator and chief United Nations delegate to the United Nations, was stricken with "cerebral complication" at his home today and was in a "grave condition."

Mr Austin was taken to hospital where a spokesman said the "cerebral complication" resulted from a "long standing heart condition." —United Press.

Burlington, Mar. 27.

Six Czechs seeking asylum in West Germany after arriving here on a "freedom plane" on Monday gave reporters this picture of rationing in Czechoslovakia today.

Soap: one piece of laundry soap monthly for a family of two. Meat: 1.20 kilos once month. Milk: one-eighth of a litre daily. Fruit and butter: normally not available. Vegetables: in extremely short supply.

Central Cooling

No doubt some earnest persons have from time to time devised a formula for the measurement of thirst. They might, for instance, multiply the temperature (in degrees centigrade) by the humidity (in degrees of discomfort) and divide by the energy expended in the game in progress or strokes per hole, goals per chunka, runs per over. But whatever the variables involved, the answer remains constant. Take a long glass of Rose's Lime

Juice with a couple of ice-cubes floating; hold it to the light and gloat over its pale translucent greenness, rock it gently until the ice-cubes tinkle. Then put your self outside it.

A Memorial Service For Her Late Majesty, Queen Mary

On Tuesday, March 31, at half-past-five, a Memorial Service will be held at St John's Cathedral for Her Late Majesty, Queen Mary. It will be attended by His Excellency the Governor, Sir Alexander Grantham, G.C.M.G., and the Bishop of Hongkong, the Right Reverend R. O. Hall, M.C., and also representatives of Government, the Judiciary, the Armed Forces, Dominions and Foreign Countries. The Service, which will last three-quarters of an hour, is to be conducted by the Dean, the Very Reverend F. S. Temple.

The first Hongkong Music Festival Prize-winners' Concert was held at Queen's College on Wednesday evening. Radio Hongkong recorded part of the performance which is to be broadcast tomorrow afternoon at half-past four. The second Concert was held at the Diocesan Boys' School yesterday. It was recorded in full and Radio Hongkong is presenting it as a complete programme on Good Friday, from 4.30 to 6 p.m.

There are three recitals from the studio this week: "Artists of the Week" on Monday at 7.40 p.m. are Rena Keown, mezzo-soprano, and John MacLeod, baritone. They will sing songs of Handel and Schubert and traditional airs from Scotland and Ireland.

A singer new to Radio Hongkong is Frank Harrington, baritone. On Tuesday, at 8.45 p.m., he is giving a short recital of English songs, accompanied by Moya Rea.

ESTATE PROGRAMMES

In her recital on Wednesday night at 9 o'clock, Caroline Braga is playing Sonata No. 14 in C minor by Mozart—Kochel 457, and an Intermezzo by Brahms.

On Thursday at 8 o'clock, Radio Hongkong is presenting a play especially written for Easter by a local author, Ned Sparken: "Jerusalem, Thursday." It is a re-creation of the scene: which led up to the Crucifixion, seen through the eyes of people who took no active part in it—the bystanders, as it were: Caleb, the old Jew; Adam, the wanderer from Babylon; Pedro, the criminal; and a visitor from our own day who finds himself transported, in a dream, back to the Jerusalem of the eve of the Crucifixion.

Programmes for Good Friday include a long-playing recording of John Stainer's "The Crucifixion" at 11 a.m., and an abridged version of "The Passion of Our Lord" according to St. Matthew by Bach, from 2.15 to 3.30 this afternoon. The Service of "The Way of the Cross" will be relayed from the Catholic Cathedral at 6 o'clock in the evening.

SPORTS

The Oxford and Cambridge University "Eights" row their annual Inter-Varsity Boat Race from Putney to Mortlake at noon British time today. John Snagge will be following the two crews up the Thames and his commentary will be heard over Radio Hongkong tonight at 7.45.

The Grand National is run at Aintree this afternoon. A description by Raymond Glendenning and a team of BBC commentators will be relayed by Radio Hongkong from 11 o'clock Hongkong time this evening.

(Broadcasting on a frequency of 845 kilocycles per second and on 9.52 megacycles per second in the 31 metre band).

DUCE'S SECRET DAUGHTER

By Sidney Rodin

London. MUSSOLINI'S favourite daughter is in London studying English. Elena Curti is her name—but it does not appear in any official record of the Duce's family. For Signorina Curti, now 30, is the child of Mussolini and a beautiful woman of Milan.

It was a love affair that secretly endured to the end despite the many women who were to enter into the Duce's life.

And the affection that Mussolini had for the mother spread to the daughter. He clung to her with almost pathetic desperation, especially as he was disappointed in his five children by his legal wife Rachael.

Thus young Elena rode in the armoured car with Clara Petacci, Mussolini's last mistress.

The bodies of Mussolini and Clara Petacci were hung head downwards by Italian partisans in a square in Milan. Only a man in Mussolini's party and Elena escaped death.

FASCIST OFFICER

Hazel-eyed Signorina Curti, who once wore the grey-green uniform of woman Fascist officer at her father's request, told me: "After the war I was a victim of the hatred against Mussolini in Italy. I fell in love, but the parents of my fiancé turned him against me because of my birth. I think my chance of marrying are gone."

"Did I admire my father? Mussolini as a political figure I do not think it ought to discuss. But Mussolini as a man I did admire very much. He was an inspiring leader who loved his country."

"As a father? I was not told that he was my parent until I was 18. It was such an emotional shock that I could never bring myself to call him father."

"My mother, and her met discreetly, and he was always exceptionally kind to me. He insisted I should be near him, particularly from 1942 onwards."

"Yet he would tell no one that I was his child for fear that it would cause me embarrassment. It stayed our secret, even though it made Clara Petacci jealous."

"The truth came out during my interrogation as a prisoner."

THE FIRST MAN WE SENT TO TITO

TOLD IN DETAIL BY FRANCIS MARTIN FOR THE FIRST TIME: THE STORY OF THE SOLDIER-DON WHO WENT AS CHURCHILL'S ENVOY

the Normandy landings a year later, and Major William Jones, a Canadian 1914-18 war veteran aged over 50. With them went three NCOs, Yugoslavs by birth, who had emigrated to Canada when young, but spoke their native language fluently.

SCORTED by Royal Navy patrol craft and much incidental pomp, Marshal Tito sailed up the Thames last week on his first visit to Britain. Ten years ago the British paid their first call upon Tito with rather less ceremony.

The story of our original military mission to Tito's headquarters, never told before in detail, can now be revealed.

Researcher

THE mission had already been picked, trained and briefed. Its leaders were two officers of Special Operations branch.

Captain William Stuart had been a British vice-consul in Zagreb before the war and knew the Yugoslav well.

Captain (later Lieut.-colonel) Frederick W. D. Deakin, 29, was a junior Oxford don turned soldier who, during the late thirties, had done research work for Winston Churchill's Marlborough biography.

There were four others in the party. Radio gear was in the hands of Sergeant Rose, Palestine-born, and Walter Wroughton, a young RAF corporal from Yorkshire. The team was completed by a Croat sergeant, John Starcevic (interpreter), and a Royal Marines sergeant from Northern Ireland named Campbell, whose job was that of bodyguard.

In the storm

THE mission took off from Derna airfield, North Africa, at dusk on May 27 in a Halifax bomber.

Over Greece they ran into an electrical storm which put them clear of their course and forced them to such a height that everybody lost consciousness except the acrobatic crew, who had oxygen supply. The Halifax returned to base and took off again next night.

At two in the morning the pattern of signal fires was spotted in the valley near Durmitor. The drop was smooth. The party landed in a mountain meadow and were quickly located by a tough, haggard Partisan patrol. Among them was an ununiformed girl in her early twenties.

"We are short of arms and ammunition," she said. "I haven't got a gun." Deakin gave her his compact pistol. Then came a 10-mile tramp to Tito's headquarters, which was not a place, not even a tent but just a knot of men in worn grey uniforms talking in undertones among hillside trees.

Stuart, Deakin and the rest were presented to Tito, who wore no insignia of rank. He was calm, courteous and unsmiling. At that moment he had little to smile about.

He and his staff officers outlined the situation. The entire Partisan army of 20,000 men was encircled by twelve German and Italian divisions who, backed by the Luftwaffe, were making a supreme bid to liquidate the entire liberation movement.

The mission had dropped in the centre of the enemy ring. As Tito spoke, bomb crumps and automatic fire could be heard in the distance. The ring was tightening hourly.

HQ proposed fighting their way out of it with two divisions as spearhead and one protecting the rear. So a fighting march began over the shoulder of 7,500 ft. Durmitor towards the forest refuges of Bosnia.

Stuart and Deakin scrapped as much of their equipment as they dared and put their radio units on muleback. Setting out on the transmitter and making contact with Cairo would take time, and there wasn't a minute to spare.

The march went on for a month, through rain, mud, cold, hunger and bombing. When the bread ration ran out they boiled and ate young beech leaves. A pack mule was killed by a bomb splinter, which meant a meagre ration of boiled mule.

Tito hurt

MOST of the time the Germans were pretty close. On the slopes of Mount Milinkada, while Partisan squads were pitching hand grenades into enemy snipers' nests and bullets were whistling about all ears, German aeroplanes dropped bombs.

One bomb unluckily found its mark. Captain Stuart was killed outright. Tito got a splinter in his left arm. Deakin one in his right leg.

The marching and fighting went on without halt. But one day late in June the battle noises suddenly faded and cut out. Tito and his men were out of the ring. From the Bosnian forests he resumed the offensive, harrying Axis communication lines before the German command had had time to recover its breath.

For another two or three months he was watched by the Deakin mission; after that by Brigadier Fitzroy Maclean's Anglo-American mission in which the Deakin team were merged.

Oxford

TITO roughly survived to sit at Kremlin conference tables as a satellite boss, sup with Stalin till five in the morning. Then to Stalin's favourite gramophone records incur Stalin's displeasure and be struck off the Kremlin's pets' list.

Deakin went back to his history books and to Oxford, where he is warden of St. Anthony's, "babby" among colleagues.

LIEUT.-COLONEL DEAKIN

Two years ago he was called upon by Mrs. Vanda Novak, wife of Yugoslavia's Minister of Merchant Marine, who was on a holiday trip to Britain.

Deakin vaguely knew he had seen the face somewhere. Then it all came back to him. She was the girl to whom he had given his spare pistol, a captured Italian one, by candlelight in a peasant's hut on Durmitor.

In St. Anthony's common room they drank Yugoslavian plum brandy and talked about old times. They even laughed about them. Not that it was any laughing matter in the spring of 1943.

BAUDOUIN GETS A TUTOR IN 'KINGSMANSHIP'

Paris. TO partly, greying Baron Jules Guillaume, Belgian Ambassador in Paris, has fallen a unique job: that of being an ambassador to his own King.

Guillaume (61), Belgium's most experienced diplomat, was instructed by his Government to return to Brussels to act as guide and mentor to King Baudouin. His job will be basically to instruct the King in the arts of "democratic kingsmanship."

Unpublished

Belgium has no Court Circular, with the result that the activities of the Palace are largely unknown to the Belgian public. Whom the King receives, whom he entertains, even the movements of the Royal Family outside Belgium, remain unpublished.

What is known is the identity of those whom the King does not receive socially. These include his Prime Minister and members of his Cabinet, who have never dined or lunched with him. They also include all foreign Ambassadors. These have only met Baudouin on formal State occasions.

To his delicate task Guillaume brings royalist fervour, sure.

PRINCE AND ACTRESS

Object: of their censure:

Rainier's declared intention to marry Gisele Pascal, one of France's most beautiful film

Identical sermons were preached in three Monaco churches. Their theme: the "courage" shown by St. Francis de Sales in the 17th century in rebuking one of Prince Rainier's ancestors, the Duke of Savoy, for his infatuation with a dancer. The moral of this clerical conclusion was, that St. Francis, because of his devotion to the Duke, did not hesitate to remind him that one of the principal duties of a ruling prince was to ensure by a proper marriage the dignity and continuity of his line.

All services concluded with special prayers for the young prince.

Rainier was not in Monte Carlo that day. With Mme. Pascal he is spending winter sports holiday at an undisclosed resort.

An achievement that startled the most exacting craftsmen

KNOWN the world over as the ultimate authority on the testing of timepieces, Kew Observatory in England recorded in 1950 results that startled the most exacting, the most blase craftsmen in our industry.

Rolex entered more than 100 of their men's small watches (23.7 mm. in diameter) for chronometer testing—for testing that is usually given only to large chronometers. The movements were to be subjected, in company with large chronometers, to the most stringent tests in the world. The experts were dubious; but Rolex were confident.

For 44 days, in five positions and at three temperatures, those watches were tested. And when their points were totalled, men connected with the watch industry could hardly believe their eyes.

The incredible number of 140 Rolex movements had qualified for—and was awarded—the precious, coveted Kew 'A' Certificate.

The full force of this achievement becomes clearer when you realize that the smaller the watch movement the more difficult it is to attain the accuracy necessary to pass such stringent tests originally designed for chronometers of far greater diameter.

For watches so small to be so good means only one thing—that the best of workmanship, and the highest technical skill go into them. And it is this standard that makes Rolex the world's first wrist-chronometer.

* The first wrist-watch ever to pass the Kew 'A' Observatory test was a small II ligne Rolex. This happened as long ago 1914.

TV gets down to work

-IN THE RAILWAY YARDS

IN industry, TV is taking over many a routine job. For instance, in a road yard in Chicago, cameras are used to compile information about goods wagons which have to be gathered by railway clerks tramping up and down 50 miles of shunting lines.

Now, one man in a TV office watches the wagons roll by on his screen and prepares his "switch list" without walking a yard. So TV-shunting is born.

Factory chimneys are watched by cameras, triggered to alarm bells, which warn of excess smoke.

The tireless camera eye guards bank vaults, checks molten steel being poured, watches test processes too dangerous for men to go near, and gives scientists a close-up view of the explosion of an A-bomb.

BIRD SENSE First . . . the Dipper

THE mystery of how the dipper—a small, white-breasted bird—manages to search for food on the bottom of a fast-flowing river without being swept downstream has been solved after years of argument.

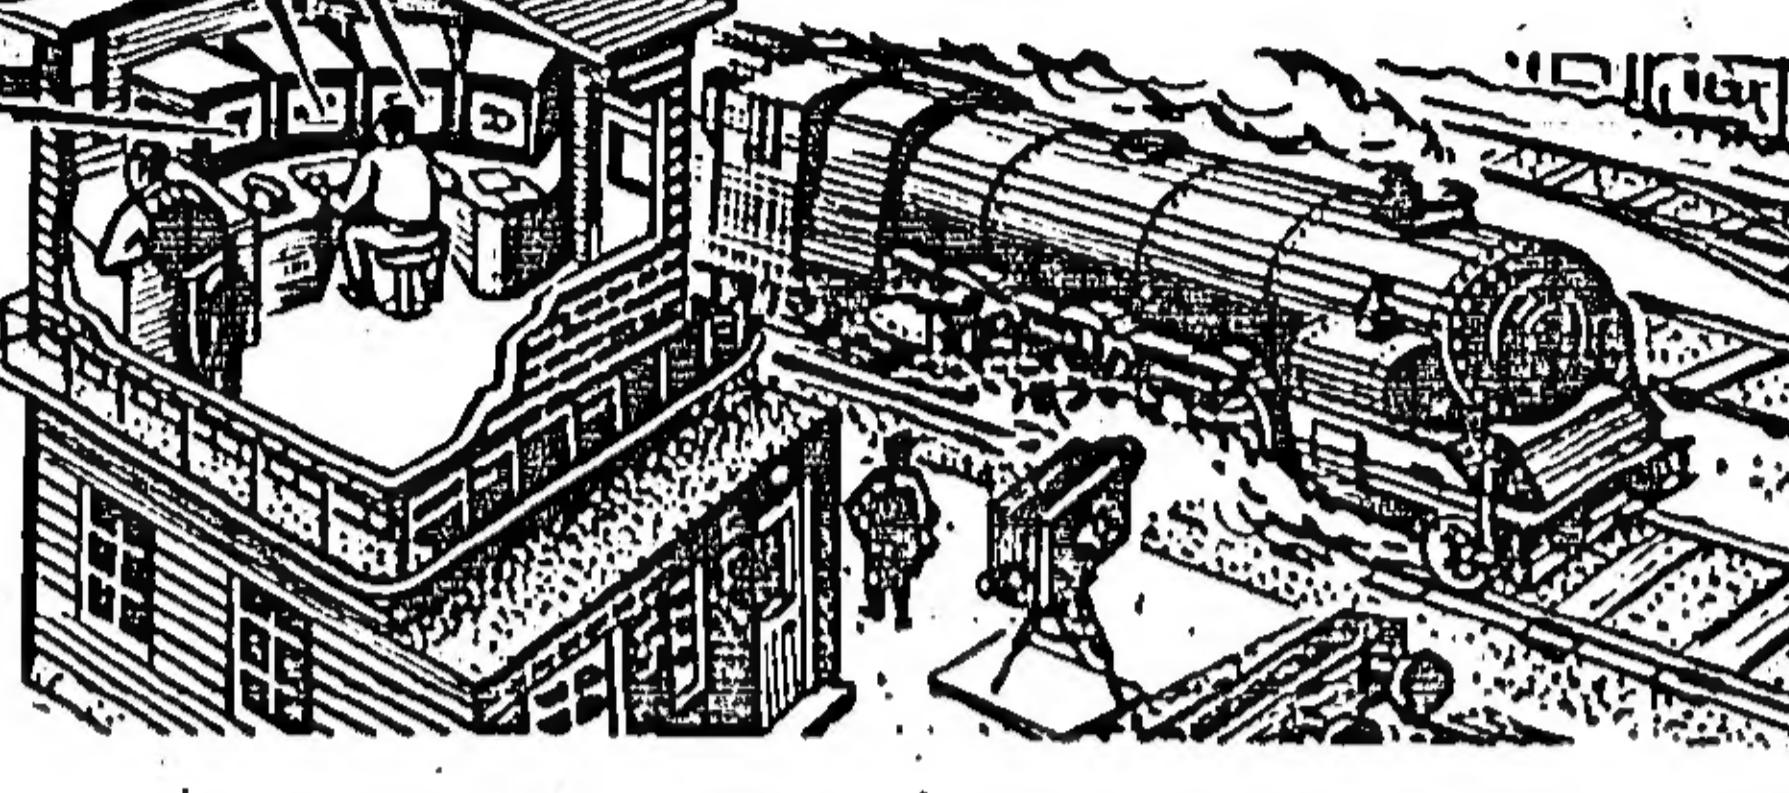

The dipper does not cling to the bottom with its claws as claimed but swims under water penguin-fashion by using its wings as paddles.

Radio-controlled from miles away the "Weasel"—an armoured scout car-can trundle over bullet-swept fields to dig up samples of earth and show them to military scientists sitting safely behind the front. The experts then decide whether the ground is fit for trenches or firm enough for tanks—without risking a life.

Cameras are now fitted to microscopes and telescopes to reveal the infinitely small and the infinitely far. Physics classes in Cornell University are now taught by TV, one experiment being seen by 100 students at a time.

Surgeons refresh their knowledge in batches of 50 or 100 at a time, watching operations in colour on big screens outside the operating theatre. The master-surgeon gives a running commentary through a microphone.

Since white reflects too much light into the TV cameras, the overalls, masks, towels, and swabs are dyed a pale green.

He may solve the great fever riddle

DISCOVERY
AT THE DOCTOR'S

SCARLET FEVER, a dangerous disease 20 years ago, seems to have lost so much of its virulence that doctors are treating it almost as a minor complaint. How has this happened?

Why can a complaint like cholera suddenly flare up in an epidemic form which kills thousands?

Seven people sit down to a pot-lit meat supper. Next day five of them are rushed to hospital with food poisoning but two escape unharmed. WHY?

A British scientist seems to have stumbled on the answer to all these questions which mystified doctors ever since germs were discovered 88 years ago.

He is 51-year-old Dr Lenie Hewitt, director of the Medical Research Council's Institute at Crowthorne, Surrey.

"I think the answer is in there," Dr Hewitt said, holding a test-tube up to the light as we talked in his laboratory.

The slightly yellow liquid in the tube was a culture of ultra-microscopic organisms so small that they prey on the germs which prey on us.

These observations have been limited to the test-tube, but Dr Hewitt believes that such changes go on inside the human body, which normally harbours millions of "germ-eaters."

So tonight a child might contract a weak strain of diphtheria germs which could change into a virulent strain tomorrow.

If the child had been immunised against diphtheria he would not go down with the complaint. But he could become a carrier of dangerous germs capable of touching off an epidemic among non-immunised children.

"Germ-eaters" may sometimes protect the body against attack by invading germs. Thus likely to lead to important advances in the fight against ill-type-of—"germ-eater"—which health.

As with so many of the discoveries which eventually turn out to be immensely useful, there is no immediate way in which Dr Hewitt's findings can be applied to medical treatment.

But they are being followed up throughout the world as an exciting new line of inquiry.

"Germ-eaters" may sometimes protect the body against attack by invading germs. Thus likely to lead to important advances in the fight against ill-type-of—"germ-eater"—which health.

THEIR TALKING GOD IS ANGRY

From Newell Rogers

New York. So when the full moon bathes the Lukachukai peaks on March 30, the sacred chants of the month, the Navajo Indians are going to appease Ye'i ("terrible one"), the talking god of the blue Lukachukai Mountains.

They feel they must put things right for having sold uranium from his hills so that the white men can make atom bombs.

Medicine men of the Navajos, largest Redskin tribe in America, 65,000 strong, claim to be clairaudient—to hear spiritually.

They say Ye'i's voice is angry. THE NAVAJOS own 25,000 square miles in Arizona, New Mexico, and Utah. They are shepherds, but their sheep failed to keep them from near-starvation.

The needs of the A-bomb brought them prosperity. But excavating uranium in their uplands mutilated Ye'i's hills.

Not enough, says Congress. Each diplomat's house will still cost more than £40,000.

NEGRI? NO, THEY SOUGHT BEBE

HERE is a man who sees the Hollywood story not in its films but in the clothes its stars chose to wear.

Howard Greer is his name and he came to Hollywood in the 'twenties when Clara Bow was an unknown youngster.

Mr Greer's job was to design clothes for stars to wear on and off the screen. He worked for dozens of them, from Garbo to Hayworth—and now, inevitably, he has written a fast, slick book about his experiences ("Designing Mafe," published by Robert Hale at 16s.).

Right away Howard Greer sets the scene. "New York and Paris disdainfully looked down their at the dresses we designed in Hollywood. Well, maybe they were vulgar, but they did have imagination. If they were gaudy they but reflected the absence of aubrey to which characterised early motion pictures."

There was Pola Negri. She liked great hoop skirts so large that once, when she wore a wedding dress in a scene, the schedule had to be stopped before she could get in front of the camera. And when Miss Negri went to the private cinema to watch the day's work on the screen she would croon to herself: "But I am so bee-ootiful. No one is more bee-ootiful."

But when Hollywood forgot her she tried to make a come-back and turned up at the railway station wearing a white suit, white Russian boots and a white turban. No one took any notice. They were more concerned with a new girl called Bobe Daniels who arrived on the same train,

GARBO

There was Garbo (born Gustafsson).

Once she explained to Howard Greer just why it was she "wanted to be alone" and was so excruciatingly shy. "When I came to America I spoke English badly and was terrified of everything around me," she said.

"Then overnight I was famous—all I'd done was to make a good picture. Instead of me being the silly hero wortshipper I found myself on a pedestal. Do I sound silly or vain? I don't mean to."

"I'm still not accustomed to myself, much less to what's happened. I still can't understand why anyone wants to meet me."

Probably the most tempestuous star Howard Greer was called to dress was singer Grace Moore who died in 1947.

Her dresses had to allow for an abnormal rise and fall of the chest "without imperilling a zipper."

She had a fitting surrounded by secretaries, maids, musical consultants, and her husband hovering on the fringes like a man, waiting in a hospital to find out whether his wife has had twins or triplets."

Greer went once to a Grace Moore first night. The Greer dress made a "commendable appearance" and its designer went home to bed.

Next day he received the following note: "If you weren't interested enough in me or the gown to come back after the concert..."

The end was just that line of bitter dots.

WHAT DOES a quick glance at this figure remind you? A bird? IF SO, you are like most people in your approach to printed pictures and words. You automatically scan them from left to right.

MANY people say the drawing looks like a rabbit. Their natural approach is from right to left. As children they often have trouble in learning to read, saying some words backwards such as "saw" for "was."

Scientists call them "dactylographs." They were discovered 37 years ago, but have been regarded as only of academic interest.

WHAT THEY REALLY BOUGHT FROM PARIS . . .

PRECIOUS little. After the show is over and the fuss and the flurry subside, only a pinch of Paris crosses the Channel. But it is the salt in the dish of British dress design.

Shortly following the release date of the Paris spring fashions, I set out to find what the British woman gets out of it all; which of the thousands of new shapes, stuffs, and shades will she ever see in her own shops?

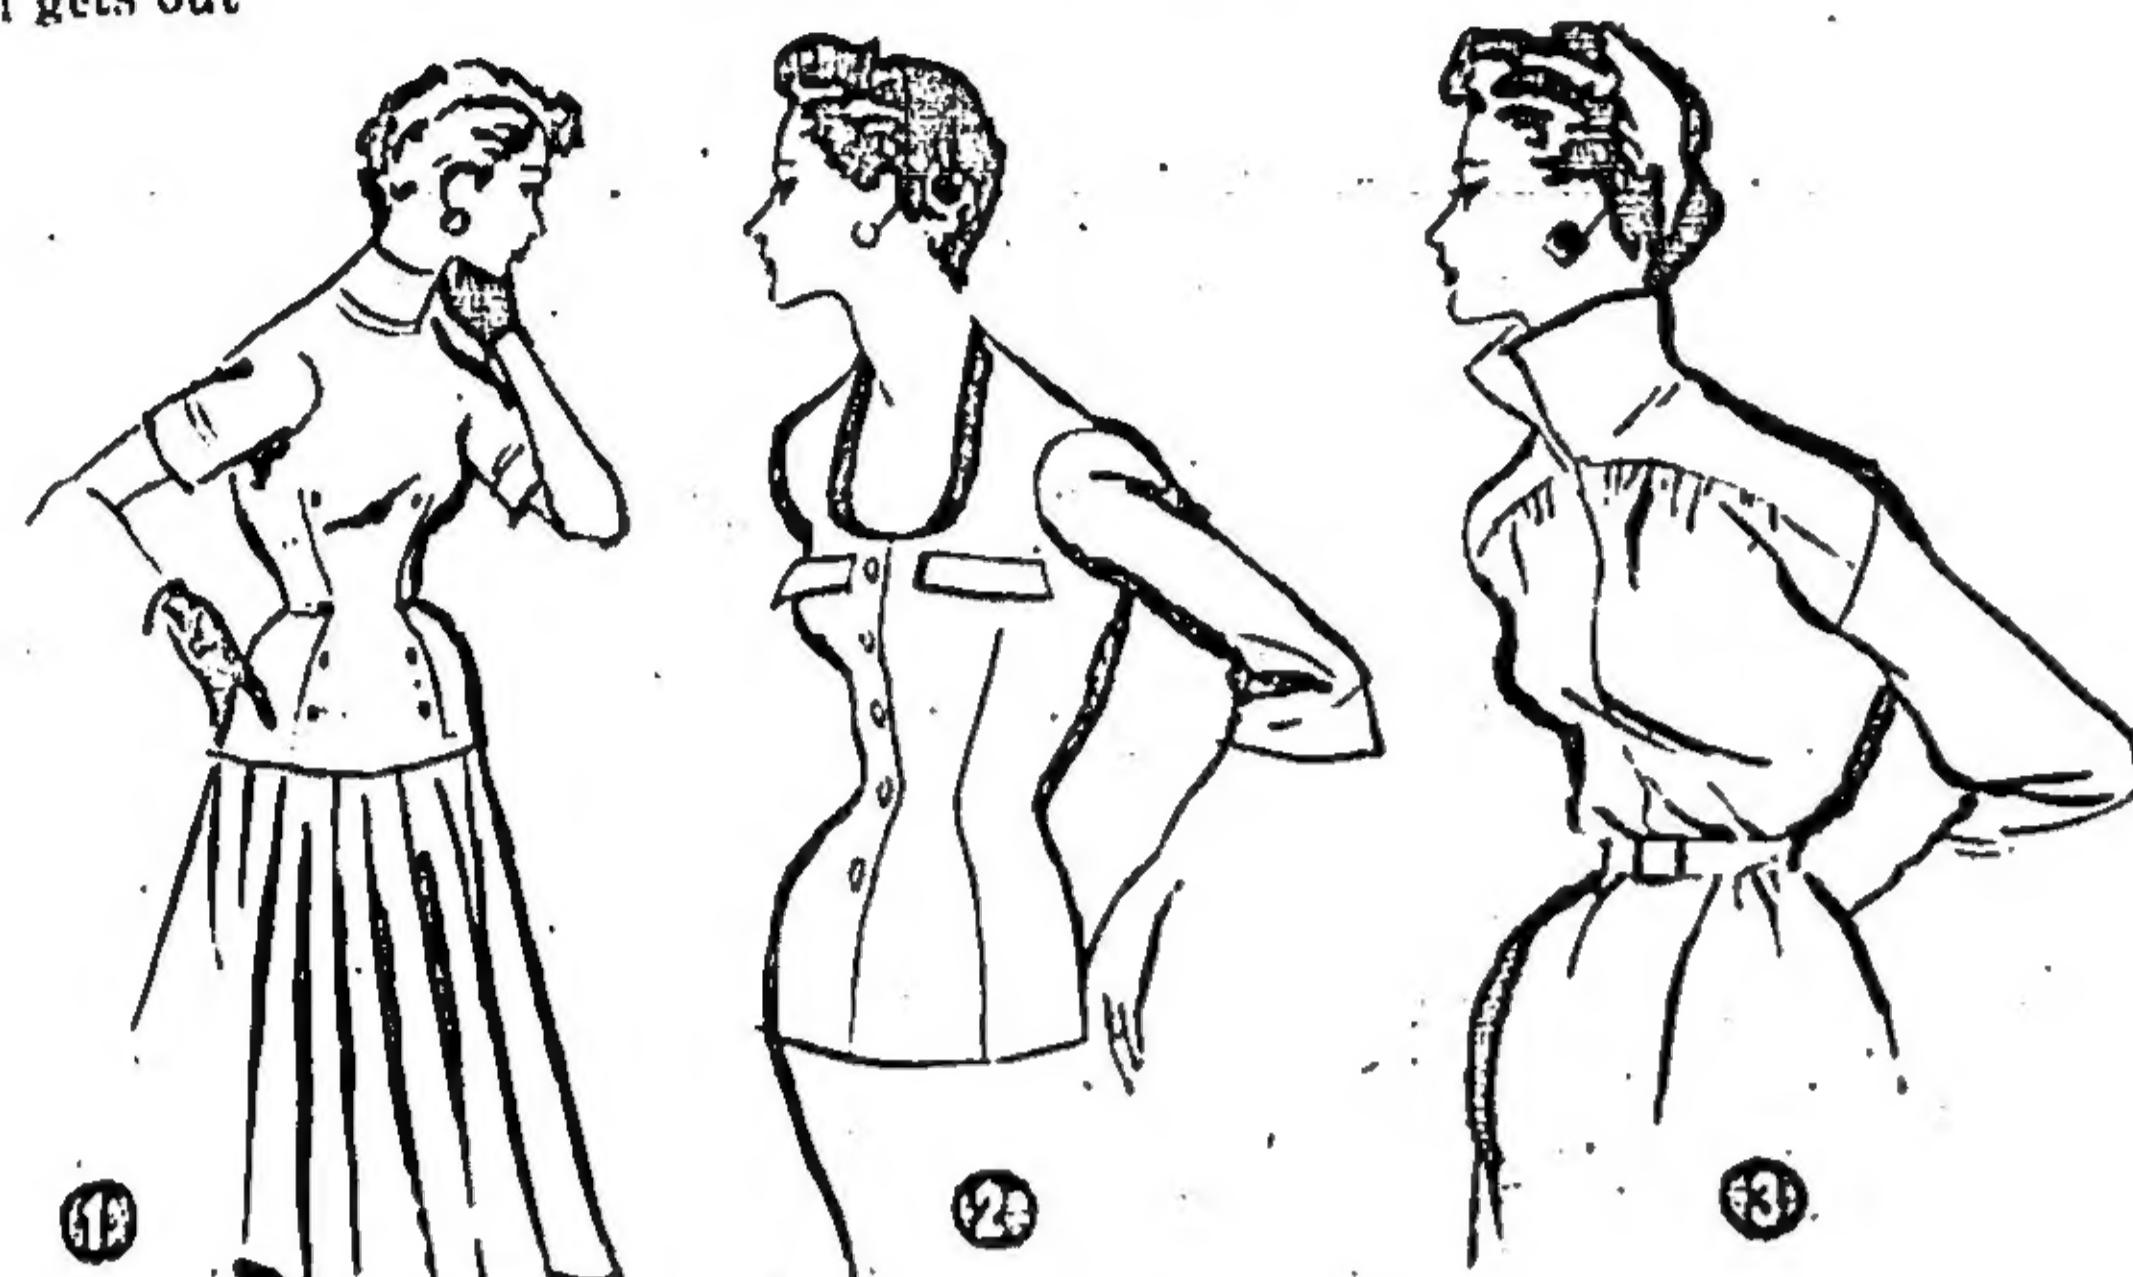

I canvassed the British clothes manufacturers who claim to take some notice of Paris fashion. "What did you buy in Paris for the British woman?" I asked each one.

The start was promising. Yes, they had bought a dress or two, or hat from one of the big houses. As a matter of fact, they added, "they were working on them now."

So I put the brutal question: "What are the copies like?"

The milliners told me with touching sincerity that even the buyer could not tell the difference between the copy and the original.

The dress people told me that Mr Dior himself would be astonished at the excellent to get the real Paris flavour at a price the British woman could afford. The material people painted a worthy picture of men in So I cut the cactus and went to see for myself . . . and I Leeds slaying their hearts, out to

COSMETIC MANUFACTURERS BLAMED FOR CONFUSING THE WORLD OF SMELLS

By GAY PAULEY

New York. A top perfume manufacturer wishes the cosmetics people would cease confusing the world of smells.

Benson Storfer complains that manufacturers of cosmetics use so many different odours in make-up that by the time a woman gets around to perfume she can't tell what it does for her.

The solution, as Storfer sees it, is for the cosmetics industry to make odourless products. Then, there wouldn't be such a confusion of scents.

"It's like this," said Storfer, who is known as "the nose" in the perfume business. "You get face powder that smells like roses. Maybe your face cream smells like jasmine. Your hand lotion smells like gardenias. Put 'em all together and the results are overwhelming."

Good Nose

Storfer admits that cosmetics-makers have to use some scents to "kill" the scent of lanolin, one of the basic ingredients of many items of make-up, but he argues that the "killer" doesn't have to be overpowering.

"A man'll spend 20 bucks for an ounce of good perfume for his wife or best girl," Storfer said. "And it's wasted by the time all those other, cheaper scents get going."

Storfer is an expert on scents in general — claiming that his years as president of one of the largest perfume manufacturers have made his nose infallible.

They'll start the day with a fume — of the same odour, of generous application of toilet water only. Then, use the perfume.

PARTY SEPARATES

By ALICE ALDEN

THE separates ensemble has its genesis in the blouse and skirt twosome. Shown here is an inexpensive but most attractive party costume, the sort of thing that is a boon to the restricted wardrobe and bright social calendar. The blouse is of nylon, glistening with washable, non-tarnishable metallic thread. The dramatic, curving collar frames a plunging neckline and ams, sleeveless bodice. The skirt is of heavy ribbed satin, with a snug cummerbund, and a beautiful point-hanging down one side.

BE YOUR OWN BOUTIQUE

By HAZEL MEYRICK

IT is just a year since the first boutique opened in London. These shops within-shops were, we were told, the answer to everyone's prayer. You could buy matching accessories for next to nothing, crazy hats, odd pieces of jewellery, and wonderful umbrellas.

Despite this promising publicity, London's boutiques ended up as just another department in the big stores, forgotten by the fashion writers, still goggled at by little women up from the country for the day.

Elizabeth and I set out to rediscover the boutiques, and find out how they were faring. The first one we visited had, we found, exactly the same sugar-pink painted decor it sported a year ago, and, worst of all, the same hats.

THIS IS THE ENTRANCE TO THE LITTLE SHOP, screamed the posters at the second boutique we came to. You are now in the little shop announced a sign dangling from a rickety lamp-bracket. We sorted ourselves out from the gay chiffon scarves, hung at just the right height to throttle would-be buyers, and looked around.

This place had developed into a throw-out or garbage boutique, a dumping ground for the cast-offs from other departments, stuffed through the trellis-work of a not very convincing continental decor. Jumpers, so badly designed that surely no-one would buy them, were heaped on top of bread-and-butter skirts of the dull working type.

The last boutique we visited was perhaps the worst. No sooner had we poked our noses round the door than an assistant bounced forward to serve us, so we didn't have a chance to browse around which is, as everyone knows, the attraction of the Parisienne little shops.

Sadder but wiser, we decided that London's fashion industry, geared for mass production, hasn't time to turn out pieces of nothing and nonsense like

Paris does. But as this style of dressing is the cheapest and quickest way to achieve chic, we decided to be our own boutique, and thought you'd like to join in.

The whole secret is to acquire a casual kind of elegance. You start off with a plain, well-cut outfit, add decorations in your own individual style, change them to the mood or the moment. The best way of doing this is to make your own accessories at home.

We have thought up several ideas that anyone can copy. But first you must adopt a tongue-in-cheek attitude, for it's no use being boutique-dressed if you haven't a sense of humour.

Finally, here's a dandy waistcoat chez our boutique—which can be made in half an hour. You don't even need to sew properly for this one.

Cut two pieces of canary yellow felt; width, from your neck to shoulder; length, from shoulder to hipline. The beauty of this is that you don't have to hem the edges under. Cut waistcoat points at one end of the strip; sew tapes on the other.

Tie your waistcoat together round the back of your neck, let the pointed ends dangle down in front. Make yourself a boutique flower cap. Cut out the crown of old hats, buy up some bunches of fabric flowers and stitch them petal by petal to cover the hat. The result is a chic Easter bonnet.

Other ideas for boutique dressing are starched collar and cuff sets; raid the men's shops for these. We once saw a girl in a strapless black evening gown wearing a man's wing collar and bow tie round her neck. The effect on top of bare shoulders was electrifying.

Wear this creation over a white sharkskin blouse, under your summer suit, but leave your jacket unbuckled so that no-one will miss the effect!

PRACTICAL HOMECRAFT*YES, let children be untidy!

by DOROTHY BERRY
star of the B.B.C.'s North Region
"Woman's Hour." Her husband is a bank clerk and they have two children.

OUR grandparents were quite sure they knew exactly how to bring up their children, and since most children seem able to adjust themselves to even the strictest regime so long as it takes their acceptance for granted, possibly no harm was done.

Our own parents, if they fell any doubts creeping in, were expert at stifling them firmly and silently. It has been left to us to be the first generation to feel guilt and uncertainty in dealing with our young.

In the middle of the night, when the hot water bottle has gone cold and new and unexpected bumps and hollows have appeared in the bed, I find myself holding post mortems on my own conduct.

Oh, for time!

AS I turn over the last grisly evidence of failure I determine that tomorrow I will be a different sort of mother: calmer, kinder, less irritable.

But with the next day all the same old problems arise, and once again I rush along solving them by hit-and-run methods that will provide the material for the next worry.

If only we could arrest family life like a film, and so have time to study it; perhaps then we could put our finger on the exact spot where our ideals and our actions once again parted company.

A reader with seven children to care for has written to me to ask what she ought to do about untidiness... the discarded slippers on the hearthrug, the gloves with holes in half the fingers abandoned on the book shelves... the hairbrush on the chair... the open book and unfinished letter on the table.

People tell her that eventually the children will clear away if she does not interfere.

Frankly, I doubt it! So far as I can judge, most children regard their home as a convenient sort of shed in which to eat and sleep; they do not mind in the least what it looks like. If the mother of the house dislikes untidiness then I am afraid she must be the one to clear things up, if she wants to be logical and fair.

I think mothers are not so much afraid of the work this entails as whether, by so doing, they are spoiling their children and failing to train them in good habits.

But let us face the fact that no healthy and intelligent child is ever naturally tidy, or sensible over money and possessions.

When they grow up and manage for themselves, in their own house, they change quite suddenly, and do all the things we wanted them to, by instinct, and because they now want to do so. Until they want to, I feel we are wasting our breath and energy trying to alter them.

The thing to do is to make up our minds what attitude we are going to take, and then stick grimly to it smothering all our doubts as they arise.

No doubts

IF we decide we are going to clear up after our children then we must go ahead and do so, without grumbling and above all without torturing ourselves with doubts as to whether or not we are spoiling them.

If, however, we decide to leave them to it then we must shut our hearts and minds to the muddle they will make of their clothes, of their rooms, of the house.

If we have brought them up correctly during their first three or four years, then they will not make a muddle of their lives—which is, after all, what we are chiefly worrying about.

What we must do is switch from one system to another, allowing our mood and degree of weariness to dictate our attitude, to the bewilderment of our children. Which is exactly what we do!

Let's Eat

BY
IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Plain Vegetables Seem New When Served In Combinations

LITTLE thought mine would win, as I stood on the roof of the Rainbow Room in Radio City and watched the carrier pigeons circling into the sunset, homing to Chicago in the Pneuile Day Pigeon race.

But, sure enough, it did! And I was awarded a specially designed hat from the hands of millinery maestro John Frederies.

There we sat in his mirrored salon, talking, not about hats, but about food and cooking. He comes from a line of ancestors distinguished in the medical profession and understands not only dietetically approved food combinations, but the actual cooking of foods for highest nutrition and appetite appeal.

"Why is it, Mrs. Allen?" he asked, "that Americans mostly eat only a few vegetables—potatoes, corn, peas, beans, carrots and spinach? Over and over they eat these until they are fed up with them. Yet in the market there are many other wonderful vegetables—turnips, squash, pumpkin, parsnips, oyster plant, mustard greens, celery knobs, leeks—at budget cost, too. I often cook vegetables together—turnip and winter squash or Kohlrabi with spinach. Delicous!"

"What might I have for a simple Sunday dinner?" Believe it or not, for me steaks and chops are a bore. So for the main dish I'd have one of my strange meats—I mean a combination of a plain and a variety meal, with a two-combination vegetable; I'd start with my own version of Caesar salad, and for dessert there would be fruit.

"Of course, without the taste appeal the food will not be enjoyed, and if it is not enjoyed it cannot be well digested," he remarked, adjusting a fold of velvet on my hat, and nodding approval at my reflection in the mirror.

"I cook with no salt and little other seasoning except herbs, garlic and onion," he went on. "Yet my food is always tasty because I cook to save all the nutrients. The good taste of my vegetables does not go down the sink. I use only enough water to cook and evaporate."

To 2 qts. crisp coarse-shredded mixed salad greens such as lettuce, chicory and watercress, add 4 thin-sliced young onions, 1 raw egg, 1/3 c. olive oil, 1/2 tsp. salt and 1/2 tsp. pepper. Toss until mixed. Then toss in 1/2 tbsp. wine vinegar. Garnish with salami crumbs.

Salami Crumbs: Slow-fry salami in its own fat until crisp. Crumble fine and use on green salads.

Chopped Beef and Chicken Liver Patties

Order 1 1/2 lbs. chuck steak ground medium-fine and form into 6 flat cakes 1 inch thick. Into the centre of each press half of a sliced raw chicken liver. Brush all over with melted butter. Place on a broiler and broil 4 inches from the heat, basting occasionally with 1/4 c. additional butter. Allow 12-15 min. Turn once. Then dot with more butter, and serve sizzling hot. Serves 4 to 6.

Spinach with Kohlrabi

Bolt or pressure-cook kohlrabi until tender. (The cooking water should be evaporated.) Then peel and dice small. Mince clean and cook 1 lb. fresh spinach. Chop coarse. Add the kohlrabi. Season with 3 tbsp. butter and reheat. Serves 4 to 6.

Tailor-Made For A Teen

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

HOME decorating may be a mother's job, but if there are teen-agers in the family you can bet they'll have a say on what happens to their rooms when the time comes round to do them over.

That, at least, is what one family found recently, when they decided home was a bit on the seedy side. Colour schemes had faded, furnishings were outmoded, a few partitions had to be installed to make the house more comfortable for a set of parents and a growing boy and girl.

Daughter's room was fussy, frilly and jam full of belongings. The colour scheme was confused, the result of various furniture and accessory additions made while the girl was growing. It added up to a hodge-podge.

One big problem was storage. A teen-ager needs a place for everything—dolls, pennants, books, trophies and all the paraphernalia a lively girl collects in the course of a busy and active existence. Wisely she decided on built-in storage units—and plenty of them.

One wall is now lined with shelves, cabinets, and closets, designed to hold books, magazines, dolls and other treasures. Other cabinets are equipped with drawers for small clothing items. There's even a sliding shelf for a phonograph. It pulls out when it's time to entertain the gang with the latest record on the hit parade.

A desk, of course, is essential for the junior girls student. This teen-ager had one built to order. It's set in a corner of the room near the window, so that there's plenty of light for s. dy. Its top is big, with plenty of working area for spread-out papers. There are ample drawers for school supplies and books. And, in back of the desk, there's a corner arrangement of more storage cabinets.

Gaily striped wallpaper in green, red, yellow and white keys the colour scheme for the room.

Doing the house over resulted in many changes—one of which benefited everybody in the family. It was the installation of room thermostats. This solved a problem for a family divided in opinion on heating—some like it hot, some like it cool. Now everyone can please himself, adjust his own room thermostat to the degree that suits him best.

The decorating's done and everybody's happy in rooms that are heated to suit personal preferences and decorated attractively to meet all needs.

Girl Hated
Music, Turns
Composer

Fulton, Miss.
A 17-year-old high school senior who says she used to hate music as a "stupid composer."

Geraldine Sims already has written four or five classical compositions, and the school band and orchestra performed a concert of her arrangements at a recent assembly session. She strummed piano when she was in the third grade.

"But I quit because I wasn't making any progress," she recalled. "I sure hated music then."

But three years ago, when a band was organised at the high school here, Geraldie decided to join because "I liked to be with groups of people like that."

Geraldie intended to learn the saxophone, but the first instrument she picked up was the clarinet, so that's what she plays in the band now.

Later, she overcame her third grade aversion to the piano and now has mastered that instrument along with the saxophone and ukulele.

Geraldie says she just "writes music for the fun of it." All of her works as far as have been classical, except for a march.

"I like to listen to popular music," she says, "but when I play it always comes out classical."—United Press.

THE MAN WHO NEVER WAS . . . . . CHAPTER 3

The Submarine Ace

-AND HOW WE CHOSE HIM TO FLOAT 'MAJOR MARTIN' ASHORE IN SPAIN..

IT is spring, 1943, and the Allies have decided to invade Sicily as a stepping-stone to Europe. Hitler must not know. Indeed, he must be foaxed into believing our objective is Sardinia or Greece. And that job falls to the Hon. Ewen E. S. Montagu, Naval Intelligence officer.

A bold plan is born. Float a dead man ashore in Spain. Dress him as an officer. Put "doctored" papers in his pockets.

So a body is selected—a man who died of pneumonia and whose name is for ever secret. He becomes "Major William Martin, Royal Marines." He is given a sweetheart, love letters, secret letters, bills . . . a personality.

by THE HON. EWEN

E. S. MONTAGU

HAVING prepared the initial plans for our coup, we considered what we had achieved so far, and gave much thought to problems that might arise as the scheme developed.

Had we done enough to build up the personality of "Major William Martin, Royal Marines"?

There he was, with his identity card, his sweetheart's picture, his father's pompous advice, his over-draft—and his confidential letter, giving false information, from General Sir Archibald Nye to General Alexander.

A LETTER

WAS it sufficient? Would it delude the Germans to a point where they would act upon the false clues and spread eagle their defences over Sardinia and Greece?

We considered it long and earnestly; and we decided to give the "Major" one more document to complete the job.

It was a letter to Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham, C-in-C, Mediterranean, signed by Lord Mountbatten.

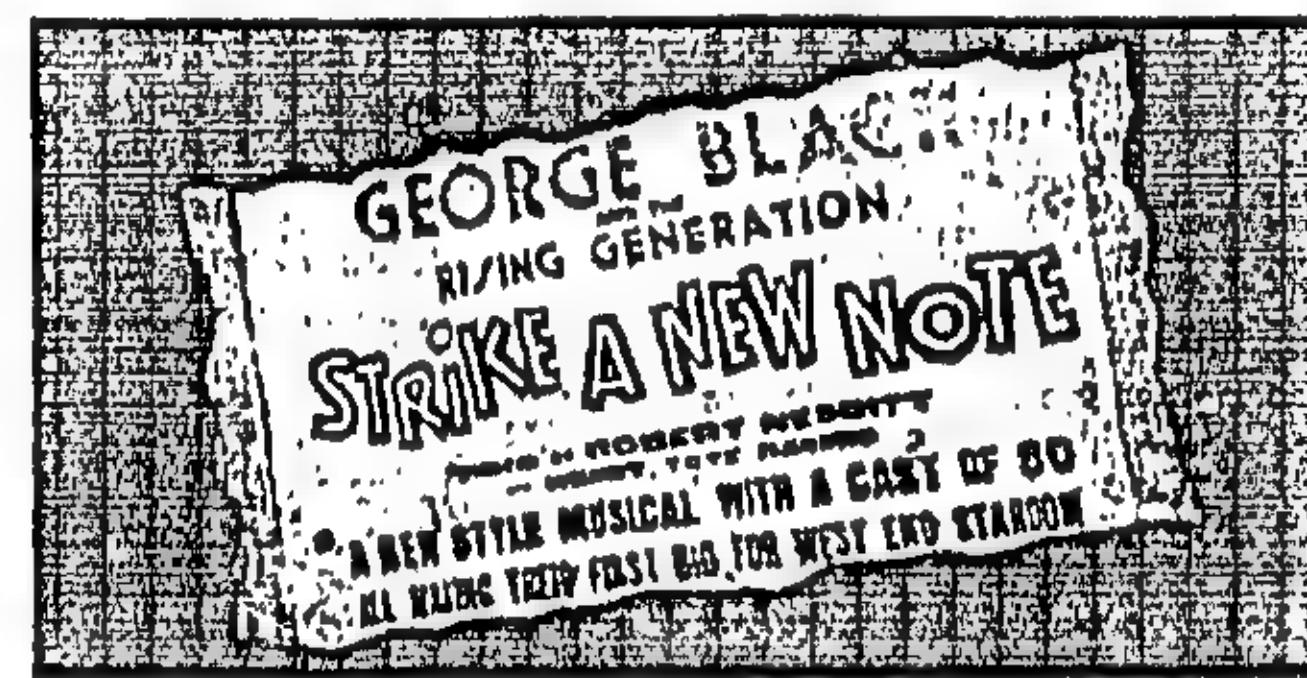

It introduced "Major Martin" as a landing craft expert—who had been asked for by the C-in-C—and it asked the C-in-C, to pass on urgently the letter that the "Major" carried for General Alexander. The letter read:

Combined Operations Headquarters
1A, Richmond Terrace,
Whitehall, S.W.1.
April 21, 1943.

TWO CLUES IN HIS POCKET...

1—Part of the "Sardine" Letter (above) from Lord Louis Mountbatten to Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham; 2—Stubs of tickets for the Prince of Wales show (below). NOTE.—This was the show that made Sid Field a West End star overnight. But his name was not well enough known in London to appear on the bill.

Dear Admiral of the Fleet,
I promised VCIGS (Vice-Chief of the Imperial General Staff) that Major Martin would arrange with you for the onward transmission of a letter he has with him for General Alexander.

It is very urgent and very "hot" and as there are some remarks in it that could not be seen by others in the War Office, it could not go by signal. I feel sure that you will see that it goes on safely and without delay.

I think you will find Martin the man you want. He is quiet and shy at first, but he really knows his stuff. He was more accurate than some of us about the probable run of events at Dieppe and he has been well in on the experiments with the latest barges and equipment which took place up in Scotland.

"MAJOR MARTIN" had, of course, the usual effects of "junk"—identity discs, wrist-watch, matches, cigarettes, stamp-book, money, old bus tickets, scraps of paper, keys, and so on.

mentioned the American Rangers who served with them. Lord Mountbatten therefore signed another letter addressed to General Eisenhower asking him to "approve" the brochure and give a "message" which would popularise the American edition.

That letter concluded: "You may speak freely to Major Martin on this as well as any other matter since he has my entire confidence."

BULKY

WITH the letter went the fairly bulky proof of the brochure and copies of the illustrations.

So "Major Martin" had to have a despatch case in which to carry all these official documents.

But how could we be sure that the floating corpse would keep the despatch case?

Here we made our only departure from probability.

We decided to assume that "Major Martin" would be issued with one of the chains that bank messengers wear down their sleeves and clip to their bags and that, for comfort's sake, when sitting in the aircraft, (for we hoped to persuade the Germans he had crashed into the sea) no would loop the chain through his trench coat belt so that he would not lose the case or forget it.

We now had to choose the spot on the Spanish coast where we wished to float the body ashore and we decided on Huelva, a small port in the South-West near the Portuguese frontier.

We knew that at Huelva there was an active German agent who was well in with the Spaniards. Also, we did not want a spot too near to Gibraltar in case the Spaniards should return the body to us for burial.

The appearance there of the body of an officer with a false identity might give rise to talk which would be almost bound to be picked up by the many German agents using the Spaniards who went in and out of the Rock.

I consulted with the Hydrographer of the Navy as to the weather and tidal conditions to be expected off Huelva at the end of April.

These were put in the "Major's" pocket before he left by submarine on April 18.

Incidentally, "Pam"—"Major Martin's" sweetheart—and I eventually used those seats on the other halves of the tickets. The "Major" missed a good show!

BROCHURE

ONLY one thing remained to be added. I was a little worried whether his pockets would be certain to be searched unless the Germans and their friends found something that made everything seem important.

Yet the crucial document from Sir Archibald Nye to General Alexander was of a size that would go into a pocket.

We decided that we must provide "bulk" for the "Major" to carry, so that he would have to take a despatch case.

We took the excuse that a brochure being prepared for early publication by Hilary Saunders on the Commandos the body would be picked up by the Spaniards, even if it did not float ashore.

The body, we decided, could be carried inside the pressure-hull of the submarine, which meant that we would need an airtight container though not a pressure-proof one.

AIRTIGHT

THE question now arose, could the body be kept until the date of departure without decomposition being too great?

I consulted Sir Bernard Spilsbury, the pathologist, once more. He took the view that if we could exclude as much oxygen as possible from an airtight container, and if the body was really cold when it was put into the container, decomposition would be so slow that if it were picked up soon after being put in the sea the effect would be only the same as that of a few days' immersion.

TODAY Lieut. Jewell's job is to hunt submarines

He commands the anti-submarine destroyer Scorpion, based at Portsmouth. Far behind him are those exciting days in submarine Seraph with his secret passenger "Major Martin." Now Commander Jewell is married, spends shore leave with his wife, an ex-Wren, and baby Diana at Lee-on-Solent. But, he admits, his mind often drifts back to the Seraph and what surely was the war's most macabre operation. And the Seraph? She is now out of commission, but still on reserve.

affected by the wind than by the tide.

So Huelva became the appointed place. It would, of course, be in accordance with the normal practice of the Spaniards to hand over the body to the British Vice-Consul for burial and to give to him anything found with the body.

But we felt reasonably confident that the efficiency of the local German agent would ensure that copies of the papers would reach the Germans.

Our confidence in him was not misplaced. We now had to arrange for the body to reach Huelva.

First I got a decision from the Assistant Chief of Naval Staff (Home) as to the means of taking it there.

I had put up three possibilities—submarine, flying boat, or a temporary diversion of one of the escorts to the convoys up the coast of Spain.

Of these the first was so clearly the best that I was authorised to discuss possibilities with Admiral Barry, the admiral commanding our submarines.

RIGHT' DATE

ADMIRAL BARRY readily saw the possibilities. By good fortune the submarine Seraph, commanded by Lieutenant Jewell, was due to sail for Malta at about the right date.

We considered that Lieutenant Jewell could get close enough ashore to ensure that

The sky is an excellent background against which to picture the graceful charm of delicate blossoms.

Cherry Blossom Time

TREES in full blossom seem to have a special magnetism that attracts cameras.

Every time I read or hear of the famed Washington cherry blossoms, the picture that forms in my mind includes many more cameras than trees.

Whether you are snapping pictures of the decorative cherry trees, the apple blossoms in your own back yard, or flowers in the garden, there are a few basic points on floral photography it will pay to remember.

With the slow shutter speeds that go with these apertures, you may prefer to place your camera on a tripod rather than run the risk of picture-ruining camera movement.

Lighting is always an important consideration in picture taking, but especially so in picturing blossoms. Since shadows are essential for reproduction of the flower form, side lighting is desirable. Therefore, avoid the noonday sun, if possible, and do your black-and-white shooting in mid-afternoon or in the morning, say after ten o'clock, when the light hits one side of the blossoms. A hazy day, with light clouds veiling the sun, provides good light for either colour or black-and-white film.

The background is very important, too. Obviously, any clutter will detract attention from the delicate blossoms. The sky is usually the best natural background, even if you have to assume a worm's eye view level to get it. Otherwise, all I can say is—the plainer and simpler the background, the better your flower pictures will be. A K-2 or G Filter will darken the sky and make the blossoms more attractive by contrast.

VIGNETTES OF LIFE*How To Annoy A Husband

BY HARRY WEINERT

The Gloucesters bear on their Colours more battle honours than any other Regiment in the British Army. It was at their head that Wolfe scaled the Heights of Abraham, and it was in the ranks of one of the Regiments' lieutenants that he died at Alexandria; they fought back to back to repulse simultaneous attacks, from all sides. At Salamanca, six reliefs of officers and sergeants fell under the Colours which were borne in the last assault by two privates. At Waterloo they were the only English regiment to be mentioned in Wellington's despatch. At Dunkirk, almost an entire battalion was sacrificed to protect the withdrawal. At Hill 233 on the Imjin, they added fresh and undying lustre to their story of gallantry.

And "Now Thrive The Armourers", in addition to its realistic presentation of the Korean battlefield, provides conclusive evidence that the Gloucestershire soldier of today has lost none of the fortitude, humour and humanity for which his forbears were renowned.

THE DENTON WELCH JOURNALS, Hamish Hamilton, 15s. 268 pages.

AND if a silly woman in a car ten years ago had driven straight instead of crooked I should not be whining till I'm still all through."

The "silly woman" had, one June afternoon in 1935, changed the life of the 19-year-old art student named Denton Welch by knocking him off his bicycle and causing an irreparable injury to his spine. Welch faced years of pain and hospital, more years in which he seemed almost to recover and then grew worse, dying in 1948, aged 31.

He was born in Shanghai, the son of a well-to-do Englishman and his American wife. He was brought up in England and meant to paint. He showed promise and self-distrust. Illness drove him to write; short stories; sketches of hospital life; a novel; this journal.

During the war, his small but real talent with its intense personal vision, began to win attention. He was encouraged by Edith Sitwell: "He uses words as a born writer," she said, "he never fumbles."

His meeting with the poetess is a passage of light relief in this journal which is, for the most part, an unhappy story of pain and frustration, of protest that health is denied him, of envy of those young men whom he would watch, fascinated, as they bathed on summer afternoons.

It is a very frank document; some of its confessions will shock. As it goes on, the writer's need to hurry grows more poignant: "I think that I cannot really have a great deal of time to do anything."

One day in 1948 he stopped his journal, with the unfinished sentence: "Even now as I wrote, I."

From that moment, he concentrated all his energy, pathetically slight, on finishing his novel, A Voice Through a Cloud.

He could work only for three or four minutes at a time, between bouts of raging headache. In a few months, he was dead. The novel was still unfinished.

The unstrained freshness of his writing makes it likely that Welch will be read when many of his contemporaries who wrote and finished more than he did are forgotten.

FROM the grove the faint crackle of a breaking twig, which could easily have been a magpie ... A shout, carrying over from a long distance off ... The slight drone of an aircraft passing over at a great height ...

"Lane, leaning against the butt of his Bren gun, was watching intently the slow-moving shadows among the fire as a trio of flares burst simultaneously a mile to the north. The shadows seemed to fade at irregular intervals towards the edge of the trees, and flatten into the ground. Lane rubbed his eyes hard, and stared again. Nothing moved. He nudged Woodbridge, pointing: "Something down yonder."

Woodbridge peered over the parapet of the trench. At first he saw nothing, until a series of dark patches moved across a gap in the undergrowth four hundred yards down the hillside. In a hoarse undertone, Woodbridge said to the section: "They're coming up along the track. About ten of them. They'll pass right in front of us. Get them in your sights, but don't fire until the Bren opens up. Don't make a noise!"

"There was a steady rustling now in the bushes, and a scrabbling of loose earth.

In selecting your subject, look for quality rather than quantity. Huge masses of blooms seldom photograph as effectively as a simple grouping or a single flower. Get just as close to your subject as your camera will permit, or use a close-up attachment. Your lens opening should be small (f/16 or f/22) to insure a range of sharpness sufficient to record details. With the slow shutter speeds that go with these apertures, you may prefer to place your camera on a tripod rather than run the risk of picture-ruining camera movement.

They see the suffering of the Korean civilians—the executions by South Korean police, the tragic plight of the refugees, the ragged and emaciated people fighting to collect scraps of food, the forgotten children roaming half-wild about deserted, ruined villages. Many of these scenes will be difficult to forget, especially the description of the haggard women, a child bound to her back by a filthy sash, who hacks a hole in the ice of the river with her wooden clog, and then drowns her emaciated child so that she can continue the retreat with two other older children. ## Cross-Country Champion Had Never Raced In Her Life Until Five Months Ago

By ARCHIE QUICK

One of the most remarkable feats in recent British sporting history has been achieved by a slim 20-year-old Birmingham laboratory analyst's assistant. She is Miss Diane Leather, who has just won the English Women's National Cross-Country Championship, although five months ago she had never raced in her life.

She went along to watch Birchfield Harriers practising at Perry Barr, and, because she has long legs, she thought she would like to become a hurdler. Even so, she could easily have been lost to sport, for when she made an enquiry no spare membership form was available. Nevertheless, she was back in a fortnight, and signed up.

As she had never run in her life it was decided to give her some experience across country, and in her first race she won by 500 yards! She never lost a race, and, finally, this girl, training to be a hurdler, became Britain's No 1 cross-country woman runner! All in 22 weeks. More than that, her first place enabled her club to regain the title.

DINNER FOR DAVIS

The King of Snooker, Joe Davis is to be honoured by stars in every branch of sport at a dinner to be given at London's Dorchester Hotel to celebrate his unique achievement of scoring 500 snooker centuries—a feat which will never be equalled.

Over 200 will be present on April 15 at this West End party, and Joe is to be presented with a substantial gift to mark the occasion. Among those who will be present are Gordon Richards, Len Hutton, Henry Cotton, Ted Drake, many of his brother professionals, Sir Stanley Rous and leading players in all the games.

THE CYCLING SPLIT

The "Champion of Champions" race, cycling's premier amateur event of the year, organised by the "News of the World," will be held for the first time on Good Friday at Alexandria Park, Portsmouth, instead of at Herne Hill, London.

The split has come through the National Cyclists' Union taking over the London track for their own promotion and obtaining an option on the nearby Paddington track. As a result organised Walls has gone into the Province and taken with him every well-known amateur in the country from the Continent.

National Sprint Champion Cyril Peacecock, who last year became the first British rider ever to win the handsome trophy since its inception six years ago, will be defending it, and he will be opposed by a field which will include De Bakker, Potzheim, Rechsteiner and Lemoigne, reigning National champions of Belgium, Germany, Switzerland and France.

In addition there will be the two brilliant Australians, Geoff Baker and Peter Pryor, Martens (Belgium), Centineaux (Holland) and Gaignard (France) as well as the leading British sprinters Don McKellow, Peter Brotherton, Cliff Wiles, Maurice Ward, Don Wiseman and Stanley Gray.

You To Play Until Next Week

white ball came off the bottom cushion, struck the bottom left-hand side cushion and ended up in line for the blue, X3.

Addressing the cue-ball very low, I played the blue into the middle right-hand pocket and screwed the cue-ball back on to the top left-hand side cushion to get in position X4 on the last remaining red.

I next planned to get a good angle position on the black. So I played the easy red into the top left-hand corner pocket with check side on my ball to finish in a nice angle on the black, X5.

This position, of course, allowed me to pot the black into the top right-hand corner pocket and by striking the white ball low with left-hand side it made contact with the top cushion and the top left-hand side cushion finally continued up the table to position X6 for the yellow.

Striking the cue-ball low, I potted the yellow into the bottom right-hand corner pocket and with the aid of a screw shot gained position for the green, X7.

Once again I employed the potting of the green into the bottom left-hand corner pocket.

An excellent position resulted for the brown, X8.

I potted the brown into the bottom right-hand corner pocket and playing the white-ball with a semi-screw action I finished in line for the blue, X9.

My next shot was an angle pot on the blue into the middle right-hand pocket and the stroke was executed with plenty of left-hand side so that the cue-ball came off the top cushion with sufficient speed to leave a good position for the pink, X10.

I now potted the pink into the top left-hand corner pocket with a follow-through stroke to gain position for potting the black into the top right-hand corner pocket from X11.

PANDAS MEET JAGUARS IN LAST LEAGUE GAME OF THE SEASON TOMORROW

By "KEYSTONE"

Regular League play in the Senior "A" Division draws to a close this week with the Pandas playing the Jaguars to ring down the curtain on one of the hottest Pennant races yet witnessed in local Softball.

This week-end will also witness the appearance of a fourth US Navy team on the local diamond this season as the USS Orca has pulled out of town and the Navy will be represented by yet another new squad. This should provide Frank Poon's Chinese Athletics with a golden opportunity to haul themselves yet another notch up from the bottom of the Senior "A" League.

In tomorrow's morning game, the Pandas Braves will show off their faces against the Madcaps to complete their League fixtures. This game will have no bearing whatever on team standings in the upper brackets of the Senior "A" Division, since the Braves have already clinched the coveted Major League title by winning handily against South China last week, and are only waiting for the official crowning of their collective heads at the Annual Presentation Dance of the Softball Association.

ding-dong battle between these two contenders for the title during which the lead oscillated back and forth as the tension-laden innings went by with excruciating slowness.

By the time Thanksgiving Day rolled around, however, the nippy Delawares had caught up with the Americans to share a two-way tie for the first place after the Delaware Tribe had come up with a close 2-1 win over the amazed Americans.

While the rest of the League had their eyes fixed on the tight race between the two outfits, a third team crept up almost unnoticed from way back with one unobtrusive victory after another, and, before anyone realised it, the hustling Rexes had hauled themselves up to the top of the Division ladder, shouldering the unbelching Americans and Delawares briskly aside to smuggle down to a three-place tandem perch on the premier rung.

A throwback to the bitter feuding of the earlier days of the Ladies' League will be provided by another head-on clash between the Champion Whoosies and their closest challengers, the Squaws, at high noon tomorrow.

This interesting tilt is the play-off of a long-postponed game from the regular League fixtures in the Ladies' Division, and should be a rare treat for followers of the distaff League.

Many a leading challenger for the Ladies' Batting Championship, as well as several potential contenders for the Ladies' Division MVP Award will be afforded a timely opportunity of displaying their prowess on the diamond before the critical and anonymous eyes of the secret Balloting Committee.

Meanwhile, at the other end of the League table, a potential triple tie was also developing, with the "finch-in-the-pan" Red Sox, the somnambulant Pandas and the unwarlike Warriors inextricably entangled in a death-struggle for the ignominious bottom place.

Spearheaded by the deadly batting of pitcher Harry Cunningham, the Americans made good their New Year resolutions by slamming out a crushing 14-7 victory over the crestfallen Delawares to break up the triple-tie. However, their bid to forge alone into the lead was narrowly thwarted by the fighting Rexes, who battled the Americans to a standstill for the second consecutive time in eight thrill-packed innings.

This double-tie for the Senior "B" Division lead was to last till the very end of the League, despite all the jockeying by each outfit for the advantage of the rail position.

Both teams completed their remaining game fixtures without further mishap, then oiled their bats and rolled up sleeves to slug it out for the title itself.

Notwithstanding the crippling loss of hurler Cunningham, the American outfit up-ended the too-confident Rexes with a comfortable 9-5 count behind relief-pitcher Jack Bordwell's slow tease to break the deadlock. But the Rexes made a strong comeback by thrashing their rivals 16-5 to even up the score and thus forced a play-off for the Senior "B" Championship.

The Accent And The Focus Is On Youth This Year In British Lawn Tennis

Says ROY MCKELVIE

This year, like 1952, will find the accent and the focus in lawn tennis on youth.

The Wimbledon Champion Miss Maureen Connolly (U.S.) and Australian Ken Rosewall both teen-agers have already started the ball rolling by winning the Australian singles titles.

Miss Connolly will be an obvious favourite to retain her Wimbledon crown: Rosewall as well as his partner Lewis Hood will be among those favoured to win the men's.

In Britain, as overseas, youth will be watched with increasing interest. Because of that youngsters such as Billy Knight, who leaves Australia for home on March 14, Robert Wilson, still at school, and Roger Becker, doing his National Service, will face what many consider an unnecessary strain.

The stable manager, Comte de Brignac, expressed the opinion that Janitor may have been a better two-year-old than was Scratch II, although their records were the same—one victory.

In Janitor there is the quality I like. He is a well-grown colt of excellent balance and physique and looks better. In one moment there seems real progress; the next those young players, and others seem to slip back.

How much easier it is to cover up oneself and one's defects in a Rugby scrum or in the cricket pavilion.

LOST YEARS

Yet, because Britain lost a generation of lawn tennis players through the war, only now are the Knights and Wilsons rising up to take the place of the Tony Mottmans and Geoffrey Pashers who, to use Dr Colin Gregory's words, are "great trouper."

I believe that Knight, unless he suffers a reaction after a winter in Australia, may prove to be the best of our youngsters this season. Rarely in any game have I met a junior—he is now just 17—who has quite such a cool and level head.

Unfortunately among the young women there is less promise and it looks as if Britain will rely again on most of those players who have won representative honours in previous years.

The rise of Miss Ann Shilcock, a ladies' international, is one of the most notable features of the women's game and she or Miss Angela Mortimer may well fill the gap likely to appear when Miss Susan Partridge gets married at the end of April to M. Philippe Chartier, a Frenchman.

It is not improbable that Miss Partridge will adopt French nationality and play for that country, which she is entitled to do though she has already won British Wightman Cup colours.

is coming!

THE folks of the village of Upper Krust had all read reports of Flying Saucers seen in different parts of the world. They were amazed, however, to learn that one was actually flying round their own neighbourhood!

Every day for a week, somebody or other in Upper Krust would suddenly hear a buzzing noise coming from above, and looking up, would see this thing hovering about, high in the sky.

Of course, only a portion view could be seen; but there was no doubt about it. It definitely was a Flying Saucer.

Just listen to a few eye-witness accounts:

Miss Clark Crossbill, who runs the village post office, had this to say: "I had just finished my second morning cup of tea, and was wondering when my next customer would be along when I heard a buzzing noise from above."

Thinking it was the same pesky blue-bottle that had made me upset a bottle of red ink over all the 2½d. stamps last week, when I tried to swat it, I looked up.

"But there was no sign of any blue-bottle. Instead, I discovered that the buzzing noise was coming from outside my post office.

"I opened the door, and looked up. And there it was! A real Flying Saucer. It flew round and round for several minutes, and then flew off. I can tell you I was scared!"

Buzz, buzz . . .

Now listen to what Percy Pollen, the village bee-keeper, said:

"I'm so used to the noise of buzzing, with my bees buzzing about all day, that I didn't realise anything unusual was going on for some time."

I looked up into the sky, and heaven! There it was! A F-F-F-Flying Saucer! I was so scared that I dived into an empty beehive!"

The village's oldest inhabitant, old Ben Iron, on seeing the Flying Saucer, ran faster than he ever had in his life. And did Ben Iron '95 if he is day!

Terrified

"Wonder if the Flying Saucer will land here?" was the question of the day in the village of Upper Krust. And the question was asked in voices full of a tremble.

Everybody — that is, nearly everybody — was simply terrified at the thought.

The village bully, Ben Beet, said that he would personally welcome any newcomers to Upper Krust — visitors from the Moon or anywhere else — so long as he could have a fresh face to bully.

Then, after that week in which the Flying Saucer had been seen so often, there was a lull. For two whole days, no Flying Saucer, was seen over the village.

Saturday afternoon came along, and the villagers went out to do their shopping. Suddenly, while a crowd was gathered round a hawk-like selling nylon egg-cosies, they all heard it again! It was the buzzing noise!

Mr Punch's Riddle

With that he read his riddle. This is the way it went:

Late last night he whistled by.

Over the land and under the sky;

What he wouldn't have given at that moment to have been able to guess Mr Punch's riddle!

PUZZLE PETE'S CORNER

NAME THE LADIES

Can you add a word to each blank space and name the ladies? 1. lady — a kind of sponge

2. lady — a beetle

3. ladies' — a flower

4. ladies' — a beau

5. lady who is loved

ADD AND SCRABBLE

Add a letter to "legal rule" and scramble for "rampan"; repeat and have "to permit"; add another letter to its head and have "pallid"; move head to tail and add a new head for "gibbet."

WORD CHAIN

Change DARK to MORN in four moves, altering one letter at a time and making certain you have a good word each time.

CAN YOU FIND THE HIDDEN CANDY?

My first is in COOKING but never in FLAME;

My second is in HONOUR but never in NAME;

My third is in ORANGE but never in BLACK;

My fourth is in BUCKBOARD and also in HACK;

My fifth is in HOLLY but never in TREE;

My sixth is in WOODLAND but never in SEA;

My seventh is in SUGAR but never in SWEET;

My eighth is in GIFT and is also in TREAT.

My ninth is in CRIPPLED but never in CRUTCH;

My whole is a candy that's liked very much.

RIDDLES

1. When does a man sit down to a melancholy dessert?

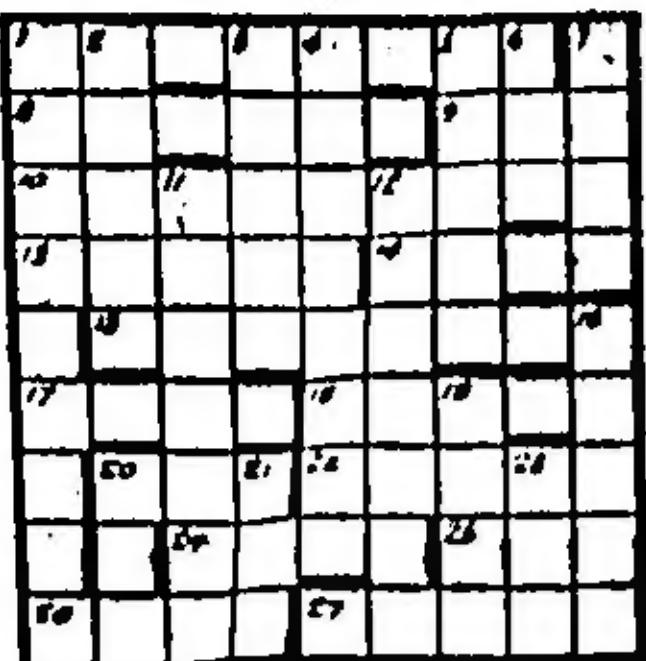

2. How did the whale that swallowed Jonah obey the divine law?

3. Why are the fixed stars like wicked old men?

4. Why is an old chair that has a new bottom put to it like a paid bill?

YOUR BIRTHDAY... BY STELLA

SATURDAY, MARCH 28

BORN today, your active and energetic mind could be turned to a number of things. Fond of the arts, you have a gift for music and yet are shrewd in business and commerce. You have a talent for leadership in public affairs and could handle a administrative duties with ease. In fact the world is your oyster! Select what you want to do early in life and then concentrate all your efforts in that one direction to secure the best, possible success.

You like activity and change. To travel will probably be one of your greatest desires. If you are not able to indulge in your hopes for seeing the whole, wide world, you will make a fairly contented armchair traveller.

You're intrigued by the occult and the mysterious, although only your closest associates may know this. You have a deep interest in the still unexplained things of science and could easily be drawn into some field of investigation where you could experiment to your heart's content. You might, too, come upon some exciting and valuable discovery which would eventually be of practical use, even in your own times. That would be when your business acumen had exerted itself enough to make your discovery a workable enterprise.

You have a rather high temper and should keep it well under control at all times. Things said in anger could be regretted all the rest of your life.

To find what the stars have in store for tomorrow, select your birthday star and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

SUNDAY, MARCH 29

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) — The inspiration of church attendance on this Palm Sunday, can bring you joy as well as consolation.

Taurus (Apr. 20-May 19) — If you can get outdoors into the country, you may find that it will do you the world of good. Relax!

GEMINI (May 20-June 19) — You might invite a few close friends to Sunday night supper and enjoy a pleasant, relaxing evening.

CANCER (June 20-July 18) — Make future plans for you and your family. Perhaps you can arrange your summer vacation now.

LEO (July 19-Aug. 17) — Don't be too adventurous, just now. There is a maximum of caution indicated, especially if outside.

VIRGO (Aug. 18-Sept. 16) — A day in which mind as well as body should be given plenty of rest and relaxation. Don't push yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 17-Oct. 15) — Your devotional duties can prove important to your future welfare and happiness. Meditate carefully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — This could be a eventful, if not pay-off, Sunday. Call in a superlative. Friends will appreciate a visit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Attempt tasks belonging to the work-day week. Take this day out for quiet, restful pleasure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Better for you not to attempt anything on too elaborate a scale. Quiet pleasures, at home, are best.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Postpone an intended trip to visit friends or relatives out of town. It is not at all possible to do so.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) — Remember a birthday or an anniversary with an appropriate gift. Give lasting pleasure to age you love.

BORN today, you have that rare faculty of being as good in the theatre as you are at detailed routine. Hence, you become a double threat wherever you operate. You know how to put your new and original ideas into practical operation, and what is more, make them pay a handsome profit! You are what is known in the theatre as a "quiet study" and it is very easy for you to learn new things. You probably were a brilliant student in your school days. Perhaps, so brilliant, that you turned out to be a little lazy and didn't do too much studying because you could always "get by."

Despite all this, you are far from perfect and you must learn to accept advice and correction when it is justified. It is only a fool who refuses to admit an error and correct it. You must learn to concentrate on a single objective, for the stars have been so generous in giving you a multitude of abilities that you quite naturally do many things, rather better than the average. It would be very easy for you to turn into a Jack-of-all-trades, rather than a master of one. But this would not bring the material success you crave.

You have a strong emotional nature and are popular with members of the opposite sex. You, of the fair sex must guard against being more flirtatious than is good for you! It is not easy to have countless admirers, but don't postpone making up your mind about a marriage partner until you have lost out!

To find what the stars have in store for tomorrow, select your birthday star and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

MONDAY, MARCH 30

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) — blur the truth of certain matters. Strive to be completely impartial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Finish all work that you began earlier this month. Success can be yours if you are conscientious.

GEMINI (May 20-June 19) — Don't let yourself be drawn into an argument with someone who tries to talk your ideas down. Patience will win.

CANCER (June 20-July 18) — Send flowers or candy to someone in observance of a very special occasion this evening!

LEO (July 19-Aug. 17) — Tact is very necessary. A caustic remark might be repeated, much to your embarrassment, later on.

VIRGO (Aug. 18-Sept. 16) — Start in today getting that all the muck you've been putting up satisfactorily. Don't leave any loose ends.

LIBRA (Sept. 17-Oct. 15) — Recklessness, especially in affairs involving finances, is to be rigorously avoided. Be conservative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — If clothing or home furnishings have become useless to you, perhaps another may be able to use them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — There can be confusion unless you are very specific in giving instructions or following them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Emotions and moods may tend to

DARTWORDS

YOU start your Dartwords today from a dungeon and travel to a crack. You must make your way through the other 40 words, arranging them in a relationship between any word and the one next to it. It is governed by one of six rules.

RULES
1. The word may be an anagram of the preceding word.

2. It may be a synonym of the word that precedes it.

3. It may be found by adding one letter to, or subtracting one from, or changing one letter in the preceding word.

4. It may be an acronym of the preceding word.

5. It may be associated with the preceding word in a sitar, book, play, or other connection.

6. It may be the first word in a saying, simile, metaphor, or association of ideas.

7. It may form with the preceding word a name of a well-known person, place, or thing in fact.

8. It may be associated with the preceding word in a sitar, book, play, or other connection.

9. A typical succession of words might be: "Sister—Daughter—Mother—Garden—Eden".

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Expert Shows Keen Bridge Judgment

BY OSWALD JACOBY

WHAT goes through an expert's mind just before he comes up with a brilliant play? Strangely enough, the expert's thoughts are neither profound nor brilliant. He simply thinks in straight lines and sticks to the point. Let's get inside an expert's brain and see how he works out the correct play in the hand shown today.

When West leads the queen of spades the expert says to himself: "I will sooner or later win two spades, one heart, and two diamonds. I need four club tricks to make my contract."

"Can I afford to hold up the first round of spades? No, because hearts are even more dangerous, and West might think of switching to hearts."

"Where should I win the first spade trick? The answer depends on the best way to play the clubs."

Now our expert concentrates on the club suit as follows: "With a normal 3-2 break, any method of playing the clubs will work. If East has any four clubs, I will be unable to produce four club tricks. If West has four clubs, however, can anything be done?

"There is hope if East's singleton happens to be the eight or the nine. In that case, I must begin by leading the ten of clubs."

Hence the expert wins the first trick in his own hand with the king of spades and promptly leads ten of clubs. West must cover with the jack, and dummy wins with the king. When East drops the eight, South's course is clear. He returns the deuce of clubs from dummy and plays the seven of clubs from his own hand.

West can win this second club trick with the nine, but now his remaining clubs—are the queen and the five, with the ace and the six in the duram behind him. South can easily regain the lead to take a club finesse and thus bring in the rest of the suit.

West can win this third club trick with the nine, but now his remaining clubs—are the queen and the five, with the ace and the six in the duram behind him. South can easily regain the lead to take a club finesse and thus bring in the rest of the suit.

JOHN CLARKES
CASEBOOK

Counting The Sacks

I was in a grey, East End side street the other morning, when into it turned the coal-delivery lorry. As it crawled into sight, its driver leant from his cab window, and announced with bellow that he and his mate had arrived.

At once the street that had been empty acquired a population. Almost every front-door was opened, and at each there appeared the lady of the house, who stood armed with broom upon her doorstep, to await the coalman's coming.

Neighbours chatted, but guardedly. I thought, and presently I saw why there was the constraint. For as the coal was shot from the sacks into the cellar through manholes, and as the thrifty women swept what remained on the pavement after it, each was intent less on the actual job in hand than on prolonging it, to have excuse to stay outside and watch what neighbours bought.

INTO THE DOCK

The state of everyone's household finances was under scrutiny; judgments were being formed; verdicts would be delivered later.

"Liz's Jim can't be doing so good," noticed when the coal came.

"One sack," "Nutty slack, it was."

"And the way she goes on. Might be slipping millionaires."

Upon what happens when the coalman calls, many reputations rest.

I thought of this a few days later, when, into the dock at the Tower Bridge court, were shown the captain and crew of a coal-lorry. Their names were Tom and Eric, and they pleaded guilty to stealing from their employers three sacks of coal, valued at £18. 6d.

TWO FULL SACKS

A coal merchants' protection officer had seen the two men stop their loaded lorry outside a yard in Peckham. He had watched while they unloaded two full sacks of coal into the empty yard, and followed as they drove away to deliver the rest at a little house some distance away.

He noticed they delivered there 12 sacks of coal, leaving one on their lorry, which they presently deposited elsewhere. The inspector called on the woman to whom 12 sacks had been delivered. He asked to see the coalman had left; it said that 15 sacks loads had been emptied into her cellar.

£10 A WEEK

TOM and Eric were quickly traced. They admitted the theft, and were arrested. Now, a police officer told the story to Miss Sybil Campbell, the magistrate, while the coalmen listened.

Tom, the policeman said, owned the lorry, and worked on a contract basis for the coal merchant. He earned about £40 a week, from which he had to pay Eric's wages of £6, and the running costs of the lorry. An expensive vehicle, evidently, for Tom put his weekly net earnings at only £10.

The two men excused their theft, the officer added, by saying conditions in the house they robbed were unsavoury, and that the woman whose home it was had been strange in her behaviour.

'YOU WERE TRUSTED...'

NEITHER Tom, a dark, good-looking man of 27, nor Eric, fair and five years younger, could add more now to their explanation, and the magistrate said to them: "I can't deal with this lightly. You were in a position of trust. The fact that this woman you were delivering to seemed unstable was all the more reason why you should have looked after her interests."

She sentenced Tom to four months' imprisonment; Eric, who unlike his senior partner, had previous convictions, to six months.

Pale and shaken the two men left the court. Seeing them go, I wondered if they were not lucky not to have a civil action on their hands as well as this trouble. In the little streets, to chat a woman of her right, a quantity of coal amounts almost to defamation of her character.

Racial Problem Dominates South African Election

Sharp Differences Between Parties

Johannesburg, May 27.

How a white minority can continue peacefully to rule a black majority in peace is the problem which dominates all other issues in the current general election campaign here. Voting is on April 15.

Both the leading parties, Dr Daniel Malan's ruling Nationalists and their United Party rivals, agree in principle on the need for segregation of the races. But they differ sharply over the right way to do it.

Dr Malan has announced that his Government, now seeking another five years of power, will stand or fall by their policy of apartheid, Africans for "apartheid" or separation.

Under apartheid, white authority is to be safeguarded for ever from the non-white masses who are to develop in their own areas in their own way, with only restricted voting rights or none at all in national affairs.

United Party leaders support segregation in principle to save some two and a half million whites from being ultimately swamped by ten million natives and other coloured inhabitants and they believe that unless the Africans themselves are consulted in some way about their future, local unrest will grow into a national crisis.

Dr Malan, taunting the United Party with having substantially the same race policy as the Nationalists, has dismissed Mr Herbert Morrison, tonight urged a New York newspaper that ex-King Farouk of Egypt, now in Italy, had applied for asylum in the United States.

Where are the responsible African leaders to be consulted, it is asked.

White races in South Africa must maintain themselves "whatever the cost", Dr Malan has declared.

VOTERS DIVIDED

South African voters are divided about the potential or immediate dangers of wide native unrest, but are mostly agreed that some form of control is necessary to protect the white man's future in a country.

Some believe that the dangers are exaggerated, arguing that the large native populations have no organised capacity for major resistance. Others, citing recent riots, note how quickly passive resistance can turn to active violence when primitive minds are inflamed.

Views differ also on whether it is good for the native to be allowed to integrate with white urban communities or whether his own happiness and survival are safer with complete segregation. Migratory systems of native labour, where men work in cities leaving their families in the reserves, are said to be wrecking tribal life and making illegitimacy rife.

United Party supporters believe that the Nationalists' uncompromising segregation orders regardless of native opinion and preference have provoked, not suppressed, discontent.

They regard a policy of treating the natives and other coloured peoples as permanently inferior, as impossible impractical and bound to fail. It fails to recognise a new spirit and new nationalism growing among African natives, they declare.

Nationalist administrators, pointing to Kenya's Mau Mau and Communist subversion in other countries, reply that apartheid backed by enforcing legislation is the only way to security, peace, and prosperity for all.—Reuter.

Crime Got Him Down

Cape Town, Mar. 27. A disgruntled Johannesburg magistrate announced today that he is considering asking for a transfer out of town—there are too many criminals around for his taste.

"Since I arrived here three years ago my house has been burgled three times," he said.

"My son's bicycle has been stolen twice."

"And apart from this, my wife and I woke up recently with a thief shining a torch in our faces."

"He escaped before we could do anything about it."—Associated Press.

Governor Of Guam

Washington, Mar. 27. The Senate confirmed today the nomination of Ford G. Elvidge of Washington to be Governor of Guam. Mr Elvidge was sworn in as Guam's second civilian governor in a ceremony in the office of Secretary of the Interior Douglas McKay about an hour after the Senate confirmed him.—Associated Press.

MORRISON'S APPEAL TO SOVIET

London, Mar. 27.

The former Foreign Secretary in the Labour Government, Mr Herbert Morrison, tonight urged a New York newspaper that ex-King Farouk of Egypt, now in Italy, had applied for asylum in the United States.

No request for a visa had been received at the State Department, he added.—Reuter.

Farouk Going To U.S.?

Washington, Mar. 27.

A State Department spokesman said tonight that nothing was known here to confirm a report published in a New York newspaper that ex-King Farouk of Egypt, now in Italy, had applied for asylum in the United States.

There are two changes in the team which drew the fourth Test, Phadkar and P. G. Joshi being displaced by J. M. Ghorpade and D. Shethan. This means that N. Kannayaram is the only member of the team who had not played in any Test in this series.

The teams will be: West Indies — T. Stollmeyer (Captain), B. Pataudie, F. Worrell, E. Weekes, C. Walcott, R. Legal, F. King, R. Christiani, G. Gomez, A. Scott and A. Valentine. Twelfth man — N. ## A Family Affair In Squash Title

London, Mar. 27.

Three Pakistani players, Hussain Khan, holder for the past two years, his younger brother Azam, and his brother-in-law, Sunrullah, have all reached the semi-finals of the British Open Squash Rackets Championship at the Lansdowne Club, London.

"The recent visit to Britain of Marshal Tito has shown that it is not impossible for a Communist government to co-operate with a non-Communist government provided neither country seeks to disturb the peaceful relations or to interfere in the internal affairs of the other,"

The match ends today (Saturday).

The State collapsed yesterday and were all out for 76 in reply to the tourists' first innings total of 212. The South Africans fared little better when they began their second innings just before tea and when stumps were drawn they were 94 for seven.—Reuter.

SPRINGBOKS LEAD

Perth, Mar. 28.

The South Africans led Western Australia by 230 runs, with three second innings wickets left, at the close of the second day's play in their farewell match here.

The match ends today (Saturday).

The State collapsed yesterday and were all out for 76 in reply to the tourists' first innings total of 212. The South Africans fared little better when they began their second innings just before tea and when stumps were drawn they were 94 for seven.—Reuter.
